

INFORMATION REGARDING NON-LAW COURSES

The following courses have been approved in the past for credit as a Non-Law Course for individual law students. You should note, however, that although these have been approved in the past they may not be approved in the future depending on the student's individual circumstances. In addition, other courses not on this list may also be approved.

All students who intend to take a non-law course must obtain approval by completing the Non-Law Request form available from the website and explain how it is related to their program of legal study or career plans and thereby enhancing to his or her professional development.

If the course is a duplication of course previously taken or an equivalent course is available at the Law Faculty, credit will not normally be granted.
